

Self-Knowledge & Identity

GOALS MONTH 1

- You can name three core values that define you as a person and teammate
- You recognize what gives you energy and what costs energy in a team setting
- You understand the difference between how you see yourself and how others see you

Who are you as a player and as a person? This worksheet helps you better understand your own strengths, values, and motivation. Take your time and be honest.

EXERCISE 1 — MY THREE WORDS

1 My Three Words

Choose three words that best describe you as a teammate. Then ask two teammates to write three words about you too.

My three words:

Words from teammate 1:

Words from teammate 2:

What stands out when you compare the lists?

EXERCISE 2 — ENERGY GIVERS VS ENERGY DRAINS

2 Energy Givers vs Energy Drains

Write three things that give you energy and three that drain your energy during training or a match.

ENERGY GIVERS ►

ENERGY DRAINS ▼

How can I build in more energy givers in my routine?

EXERCISE 3 — PERSONAL VALUES COMPASS

3 Personal Values Compass

Rank the values below from 1 (most important) to 6 (least important) for you as a player and person.

_____ Loyalty

_____ Honesty

_____ Courage

_____ Perseverance

_____ Respect

_____ Team Spirit

Which value do you live up to least? What do you want to change?

REFLECTION

When you look back at the end of this season: what kind of teammate do you want to have been?

MENTAL RESILIENCE — POSITIVE SELF-TALK

Write one sentence you say to yourself when you doubt yourself as a player. Then rewrite it positively as a strength.

My power sentence for this season:

"The most important thing is to try and inspire people so that they can be great in whatever they want to do."

— Kobe Bryant — 5× NBA Champion
