

Culture in action

GOALS SESSION 5

- You formulate rituals that keep our team culture alive every week
- You know how to hold each other accountable when culture comes under pressure during the season
- You close the preseason with a shared picture of the culture you want to be

Culture is not what you say, it is what you do when nobody is watching. After four sessions you know who you want to be. Now it is about making that real every day.

EXERCISE 1: OUR RITUALS1 Rituals that protect our culture

Rituals are small, repeated actions that keep culture alive. Write down three rituals you will introduce this season. For training, after a game, or in a difficult moment.

BEFORE TRAINING

AFTER A GAME

IN A DIFFICULT MOMENT

Which ritual has the biggest impact on the team mood? Why?

EXERCISE 2: THE CULTURE GUARD2 Who guards our culture?

Every player is responsible for the culture. Sometimes a clear agreement helps. Write down how you hold each other accountable when the contract isn't kept.

Our accountability approach, how, when, with whom:

What do we do when someone keeps showing the same behavior?

EXERCISE 3: CULTURE CHECK MIDSEASON

3 Our culture check at month 4

Write down three questions you want to ask each other halfway through the season, to check if the culture is still alive. Plan now when you will do this.

1

2

3

Date for the culture check planned:

MY PROMISE TO THE SEASON

Write one strong sentence about what you will contribute to the team culture this season. As a promise to yourself and to the team.

Name

Date

MENTAL RESILIENCE: CULTURE UNDER COMPETITIVE PRESSURE

When is our culture under the most pressure? Think of a losing streak, internal competition, or a playing time conflict. Write down the scenario and what you do then to defend our culture.

"Champions behave like champions before they are champions."

Bill Walsh, three time Super Bowl Champion Coach, San Francisco 49ers