

Our Team Contract

GOALS SESSION 2

- You co-create behavioral norms that you personally endorse and uphold
- You understand the difference between rules imposed by the coach and norms the team creates itself
- You consciously sign a contract as an expression of commitment to the team culture

A team contract doesn't work when the coach makes it. It works when you write it yourselves. Today you build the code of conduct that protects your culture this season.

EXERCISE 1 — WHAT DO WE EXPECT FROM EACH OTHER?

1 My Top 3 Expectations

Write three concrete behaviors you expect from every teammate — not about performance, but about attitude, respect, and effort.

1

2

3

Which expectation are you most willing to uphold yourself?

EXERCISE 2 — MY PERSONAL PROMISE

2 What Do I Promise the Team?

Write three promises you personally make to the team for this season. Make them concrete enough to evaluate at the end of the season.

I promise to

I promise to

I promise to

EXERCISE 3 — SIGNATURE & COMMITMENT

3 The Team Contract

After the group discussion: write the three behavioral rules you chose as a team. Then sign as an expression of your commitment.

Our team chooses:

1

2

3

What do I do if a teammate doesn't uphold the contract?

Name

Signature

Date

REFLECTION

Which promise will be hardest for you to keep? Why? And how will you hold yourself accountable?

MENTAL RESILIENCE — COMMITMENT UNDER PRESSURE

Write the scenario where you're most likely to break your promise (e.g. after a loss, conflict, bad day). What do you do concretely to honor your commitment anyway?

"Agreements, not rules. You can break a rule. You own an agreement."

— Atul Gawande — surgeon & team researcher