

Conflict & Recovery

GOALS SESSION 4

- You recognize the difference between healthy conflict (that stimulates growth) and destructive conflict
- You can apply the steps of recovery after tension or disagreement in the team
- You dare to address someone without damaging the relationship

Avoiding conflict is not culture — it is stagnation. Strong teams have tension, but they know how to get through it. Today you learn to see conflict as a growth opportunity, not a threat.

EXERCISE 1 — MY CONFLICT STYLE

1 How Do I React to Tension?

Choose the response that most resembles you when there is tension in the team. Circle or underline your style.

Avoider: I ignore it and hope it resolves itself

Accommodator: I agree to keep the peace, even if I disagree

Confronter: I say directly what I think, sometimes too bluntly

Mediator: I look for a solution that works for everyone

When does your style help the team? When does it hurt?

EXERCISE 2 — THE DIFFICULT CONVERSATION

2 Addressing Someone

Use the model: I see... I feel... I ask you to... Think of a tension with a teammate and write it out.

I SEE...

I FEEL...

I ASK YOU TO...

EXERCISE 3 — RECOVERY STEPS

3 How Does Our Team Recover After Conflict?

After the group discussion: write the three steps you agree on as a team to resolve tension — quickly, honestly, and without waiting a night.

Who is the natural mediator in our team? What makes them suitable?

PERSONAL REFLECTION

Write a conflict or tension from the past that stayed unresolved. What could you have done differently? What do you learn from this for this season?

MENTAL RESILIENCE — EMOTION VS REACTION

Write: what do you feel physically when there is tension (heart rate, body tension, thoughts)? And what do you do in the next 60 seconds before reacting to avoid acting impulsively?

"Peace is not the absence of conflict. It is the ability to handle conflict by peaceful means."

— Ronald Reagan
