

SESSION 7 — MENTOR GUIDE

My Role in the Team

Many athletes think leadership is for the stars. Your job: show every athlete they are already leading — in their own way.

SESSION GOAL

Help the athlete consciously know and value their team role — and see leadership as character, not status.

CONVERSATION FLOWOPENING (5 MIN)

“If you didn’t show up to training tomorrow — what would the team miss? Not technically, but as a person?”

💡 Unexpected question that goes straight to contribution.

EXPLORING (15 MIN)

“What is your role at school, at home, with friends — is that the same role as in the team?”

💡 Roles are context-dependent. Helps the athlete broaden self-awareness.

DEEPENING (10 MIN)

“When have you really helped someone on the team — not with an action, but as a human being?”

💡 Concrete memory activates self-worth as a teammate.

CLOSING (5 MIN)

“What do you want your teammates to remember about you in 5 years?”

💡 This is a powerful legacy question that invites big thinking.

OBSERVE

- Does the athlete talk easily about themselves as a teammate — or do they always focus on individual performance?
- Do they mention teammates' names with care and attention — or abstractly ("the team")?
- Is there someone on the team the athlete consciously avoids? That's valuable information.
- How do they react to the question of what the team would miss without them? Shyness, pride, embarrassment?

△ NOTE

Athletes who strongly focus on individual performance may struggle with this session. Normalize: "Individual growth and team growth reinforce each other." Don't force altruism.

CLOSING

Name what you see in them as a teammate. Concretely: "In the way you talk about your teammates, I see someone who genuinely cares about others. That is leadership."
