

Culture in Action

GOALS SESSION 5

- You formulate concrete rituals and habits that keep our team culture alive every week
- You know how to hold each other accountable when culture is under pressure during the season
- You close the preseason with a shared image of the culture you want to be

Culture is not what you say — it is what you do when nobody is watching. After four sessions you know who you want to be. Now it is about how you make that real every single day.

EXERCISE 1 — OUR RITUALS

1 Rituals that Protect Our Culture

Rituals are small repeated actions that keep culture alive. Write three rituals you will introduce this season — before training, after a match, or during difficult moments.

BEFORE TRAINING

AFTER A MATCH

DURING A DIFFICULT MOMENT

Which ritual has the most impact on team atmosphere? Why?

EXERCISE 2 — THE CULTURE GUARD

2 Who Guards Our Culture?

Every player is responsible for culture — but sometimes an explicit system helps. Write how you will hold each other accountable when the contract is not followed.

Our accountability mechanism (how, when, with whom):

What do we do if someone keeps showing the same behavior?

EXERCISE 3 — CULTURE CHECK MID-SEASON

3 Our Culture-Check at Month 4

Write three questions you want to ask each other halfway through the season to measure whether the culture is still alive. Schedule when you will do this now.

1

2

3

Scheduled date for culture-check:

MY PROMISE TO THE SEASON

Write in one powerful sentence what you will contribute to the team culture this season — as a promise to yourself and to the team.

Name

Date

MENTAL RESILIENCE — CULTURE UNDER COMPETITION PRESSURE

When is culture most under pressure? Write the scenario (losing streak, internal competition, playing time conflict) and describe your personal action plan to defend the culture.

"Champions behave like champions before they are champions."

— Bill Walsh — 3× Super Bowl Champion Coach, San Francisco 49ers