

Communication

Character First*GOALS MONTH 4

- You can apply the I-Message model in a real situation from your sports life
- You give constructive feedback to a teammate without triggering blame or defensiveness
- You plan and have at least one difficult conversation you have been postponing

How you speak determines how you work together. You learn the difference between reacting and truly communicating, and how to give feedback without damaging relationships.

EXERCISE 1 — THE I-MESSAGE1 The I-Message

The model: "I see... I feel... I need... I ask you to..." Think of a real situation and work it out with this model.

The situation:

I SEE...I FEEL...*I NEED...*I ASK YOU TO...*EXERCISE 2 — THE CONVERSATION I KEEP POSTPONING*2 The Conversation I Keep Postponing

Write a conversation you've wanted to have for a long time but keep postponing. With a coach, teammate, or parent.

Who is this conversation with?

Why do I keep postponing it?

EXERCISE 2 CONTINUED — HET GESPREK

Write the first sentence to open the conversation (use the I-Message):

What do I hope this conversation will produce?

When will I plan this? (date + place)

EXERCISE 3 — AFTER THE FEEDBACK ROUND

3 Feedback Round Reflection

What was the best feedback you received? What will you concretely do with it? Also write what you learned about how you give feedback.

The best feedback I received:

What will I concretely do with it?

What did I learn about how I myself give feedback?

"The single biggest problem in communication is the illusion that it has taken place."
