

Our Identity

GOALS SESSION 1

- You can name three values you want our team to radiate this season
- You understand why shared identity is the foundation of a strong team culture
- You contribute to a shared team statement that guides the season

Culture doesn't start with rules — it starts with who you are. Who are we as a team? Not what we want to win, but how we want to be. This worksheet lays the foundation.

EXERCISE 1 — WHO ARE WE?

1 Three Words for Our Team

Write three words you want people to say about our team — not about our results, but about our behavior and character.

My three words:

After the group discussion — the three words our team chose:

EXERCISE 2 — OUR CULTURE ANCHORS

2 What Do We Keep? What Do We Let Go?

Think about last season. Which habits or behaviors do we want to keep in our culture? Which do we consciously leave behind?

WE KEEP ►

WE LET GO ✕

EXERCISE 3 — OUR TEAM STATEMENT

3 One Sentence That Describes Us

Write together one sentence that describes who you want to be this season — as a team, not as individuals. Not a slogan, but a real promise.

Our team statement this season:

What does this statement mean concretely for me as a player?

PERSONAL REFLECTION

Which behavior from last season — yours or the team's — was not in line with the culture we want to be? How will you address that?

MENTAL RESILIENCE — IDENTITY ANCHOR

Write one sentence you tell yourself when you're under pressure to behave differently than the team culture requires. Your anchor.

"Culture is not just one aspect of the game — it is the game."

— Lou Gerstner — CEO IBM